

Greetings From The Pacific Northwest Palm & Exotic Plant Society of Greater Vancouver

Something about your garden caught our Eye !

The Pacific Northwest Palm & Exotic Plant Society (PNWPEPS) is a non-profit chapter of the International Palm Society. We are dedicated to the successful cultivation of palms and other exotic plants outdoors in British Columbia, Washington and Oregon. The Society has been sharing Mediterranean gardening information for over 20 years.

We invite you to attend a FREE meeting at VanDusen Gardens located at 5251 Oak Street, Vancouver, British Columbia.

The Society holds four general meeting per year at VanDusen Gardens in Vancouver. The meetings are free to attend and are held on the 4th Monday evening of March, May, September and November.

Each meeting includes a guest speaker to talk about such gardening aspects as winter protection, landscape design, garden lighting and new hardy plant species to try in our gardens. In addition, there is always a number of unusual or hard-to-find plants available in our raffle at each meeting.

To find out more about protecting your exotic plants in the winter, feeding and caring for them for the rest of the year, and all the details of the Society's other events, tours, BBQ's and activities, visit our website below.
